Writing

Charles Dickens once said: "Procrastination is the thief of time", collar him. It means that people are used to postpone important things to do, for example work and study but continue waste their time on meaningless pastime. I agree with his words because I also have sort of problems with procrastination. Sometimes it prevents me from meeting deadlines at school which is very important on my own self-development. I'm fully aware that scrolling short videos or just lying on a bed is a time-wasting when you have other things to do but I still hesitate when I think about it. Responsibility avoidance is a big problem and I want people and me to stop it. Once, I wanted to start an online course in English with a cool tutor and I needed to do the test at first to be included in a group. Well, it was summer so there were days when I wanted to sleep and do nothing. And I delayed this test. As a result, I sent it too late so the group was already closed. I felt really upset and realised that I could get a lot of knowledge from that course and missed a chance. I think people shouldn't sit idle, they need to start thinking about consequences of long procrastinations. They should live their lives and do everything right here and right now!
